

YIN YANG POO

CUTS LIKE A KNIFE But do those scissors cut as well as that nipple would? Holy fiddlesticks, Batman! JIZZZZZZZZZZ!

Stupidio Theatre angry, sad

ASHY ASHY BO BASHY
All-powerful T&A queen

After receiving criticism from the local media regarding its tendency to cast overacting thespians, the Rod Fraser University Drama Department's Stupidio Theatre arranged a protest on the front steps of the Grimm's Centre. The participants were seen baring genitals while frantically waving blunt scissors, all in an attempt to prove their point.

"I don't fucking believe this!" screamed BFA student Hans Fieldman, his eyes wide and blood-shot, resembling those of a schizophrenic pedophile. "I try tho hard. I try tho fucking hard. It's because I'm gay, isn't it? Everyone hath something against gay actors, and the way we lithp when we're not in character. Well guesth what? We're all fucking flamboyant! Everyone of uth!"

William Shatner, director of last year's critically acclaimed My Starship is Your Enterprise, was deeply puzzled by this turn of events. His production won the Sterling award for

The Best Production for Seniors to Fall Asleep to While Receiving a Generous Discount.

"If I were a shitty band, I wouldn't want to be constrained by any musical genre. But because we're not shitty, we like being, uh, defined. Like as post-metal. Or something. Fuck, I'm stoned."

SOME STUPID-ASS BAND GUY WHO THINKS HE'S SUAVE

And while much criticism stemmed from the sexually explicit nature of the performance—namely from Shatner's cameo montage, which involved him prancing around in a technicolour coat while rubbing his nipples suggestively—the criticism of overacting wasn't far behind.

"Whatever, I don't give an orbiting fuck. I have too much money and sex appeal to care," Shatner says, sipping his eggnog latté. "To be honest, I did the production [of My Starship is Your Enterprise] so I could shoot up with the cast and propose a gang bang. But don't print that, because it'll ruin my credibility."

According to Shaved Cherry, local media guru and hater of everything classy, the media community's remarks are totally legit.

"If there's no penis in it, then there's no satisfaction," Cherry says self-indulgently, rubbing his hands in a circular motion.

"I need cock. I also need hand lotion, and to get a haircut," says Cherry as he licks his silky fingers and smooths out his eyebrows.

With all of the debate surrounding the degree to which a University production should be criticized, Roberta McNeil, stage hand for the Walterdick Theatre, says Stupidio Theatre should just "shut the fuck up and be happy [they] even get press."

Syphilis

The Frenchman's Disease
Medical Records
www.cdc.gov/std/Syphilis/STDFact-Syphilis.htm
<http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Syphilis>

FILLED WITH DREAD
Disease free—hopefully

The insanely popular Syphilis has had a long and storied career. Starting out as a rather minor local phenomenon in North America, Syphilis was discovered by Columbus and convinced to partake on a European tour shortly thereafter, beginning in Naples. In Europe, Syphilis' popularity quickly spread due to European audiences embracing this exotic new culture that they had been sorely lacking. With Europeans going crazy for Syphilis, its popularity has spread worldwide and has even broken out in its native North America, whose inhabitants had previously been more resistant to their homegrown talent, preferring the British invasion led by such notables as the now defunct smallpox and the ever popular TB. Considering how long Syphilis has been touring, it comes as no surprise that many current fans were first introduced to it in the womb. And while Syphilis is slowly losing popularity with the ladies, it continues to be popular among males and is increasingly being embraced by the gay scene. Even in conservative Alberta there's been a rapid increase in popularity.

While Syphilis has traditionally caused mercurially tempered French nobility to wig out, many will find this latest treatment much more appealing. This latest release displays Syphilis' continually evolving influences; in this case a more rash, raw feel likely a result of its recent tours with up and comers HIV.

I give Syphilis three stars, and a healthy dose of penicillin.

free stuff!

Some furniture must be retired

Be one of the first to see the epic saga of an editor's life, consumed by her hatred of upholstery

E-mail contests@getaway.u...ca

deceber featured
STUDENT GROUP

UoFA
Scuba Appreciation Club

www.ualberta.ca/~scuba
E-mail: scuba@ualberta.ca
Office: SUB 0-40R

Year Established: March 2006
Membership: 106

Purpose of the Group:

The University of Alberta Scuba Appreciation Club caters to the needs of students in the pursuit of scuba diving. We strive to offer an underwater experience among friends that is enriching, rewarding, and affordable.

We conduct monthly pool sessions to introduce new divers to the art of scuba diving. Our past events include a weekend dive trip to BC, and an underwater pumpkin carving contest. We also participated in the Sylvan Lake Clean-up in an effort to promote ecological awareness and conservation. Aside from all the dive trips, we've also had many social events and dive presentations. Numerous dive trips are being planned for New Years 2006, Reading Week 2007, and across summer.

FOR INFORMATION ON THE
OVER 350 STUDENT GROUPS
ON CAMPUS CHECK OUT:

WWW.SU.UALBERTA.CA/STUDENTGROUPS