

Offensive Editor can't skate, gets beat up by girls

P-OW BLOWIN'
Cocksucker Extrordinaire

A charity ringette game between the University of Old Bertha's Ringette Club and a celebrity team of local media members turned nasty Friday night, as the celebrities clutched, grabbed and cheated their way to forcing an 11-11 tie. An understandably upset ringette team exacted revenge after the game ended, curb-stomping former Oiler Dave Hunter, insulting TEAM 1260's Bob Stauffer until he cried, and sending Getaway Offensive Editor Sadam Beaumont home in a stretcher.

"Who knew that he'd be such a pussy?" UOB forward Lichelle Mennox said of the local writer who thinks too much of himself. "Sadam Beaumont? More like Madam Beaumont. I've seen eight-year-olds skate better."

Beaumont attracted the ire of the UOB girls after he turned the puck over on a breakaway, fell down dramatically and punched Skilled Meters in the head repeatedly. While it wasn't as disgraceful as the actions of Stauffer and Hunter, Beaumont took the brunt of the attack because he's less physically intimidating, according to Mennox.

"Have you seen Stauffer? I was afraid he'd sit on me," Mennox explained. "And Dave Hunter's only strategy seemed to be to out-fat everyone on the ice. Everytime he appears in one of these games, it looks like he's added 15 pounds from the last time. Frankly, Gaumont looked like the only one we could take."

Overshadowed by the LAPD-on-Rodney-King-style beat-down he received was Beaumont's decent play in his inaugural ringette game. The speedy winger was a constant threat in the offensive zone—or he would have been had he been able to stab a pass from his linemates without falling. He also set up a goal from The Stauff that counted as five because the media team was able to string together three consecutive passes, proving once again that ringette's rules make little sense to everyone who isn't a ringette player.

DYKE AUTOEROTICA

DONKEY PUNCH, BITCH! Beaumont lays the lumber, and by lumber I mean his fist, into UOB player Skilled Meters. The cheap shot instigated a 15-minute brawl.

"Yeah, I played pretty well. Coach kept putting me on a line with Christy Chorley and Bob Stauffer and they stifled my creativity," Beaumont noted. "As for the beatings, Mennox needs to grow a pair and take it like a man. Besides, [the real ringette players] were just pissed off because ringette isn't a real sport."

The game raised $482 for the Cross Cancer institute, but some were concerned that the real issues were being overlooked.

"Look, it's terrific that we're raising money for cancer research and stuff, but the real problems at this university continue to be ignored," argued Stupid Union's Vice-President (Grapes and Gripes) Suave Combover. "Tuition is still waaaay too high, and I don't see anyone raising money for that? Cancer has the Terry Fox Run; this was a university event and it should have been addressing university problems."

TWIN#1

NOW THAT'S TEAM WORK "Harvard" bizletes Locked Vault and Jizz Turdin' labour in the combined beer-swig event. The duo placed third out of ten teams.

'Harvard' team drinks way to hospital at Western Bizznizz Games

That's where kangaroos go when they get sick! Cause they hop, get it? Hopital?

RANDREW HEISFREE
P-Ow's Bitch

After a week of drunken competition at the Western Bizznizz Games in Lake Louise, a group of University of "Harvard" business students are returning home with some flashy new hardware.

"It's the most bling I've ever seen in my faculty," Skool of Capitalism dean Taken Monét said.

The annual event marked the introduction of a series of new events that are designed to allow competitors showcase a wide range of skills—such as beer guzzling, bare-assed jogging, balcony jumping, weed smoking and hooking up with girls that have low self-esteem helped the Edmontonians make the top of the podium, much to the delight of coach Les Lential.

"You know, we had a great bunch of guys this year," Lential said. "Getting a bunch of the Dekes to transfer into business definitely helped strengthen the O-line, too. Those guys totally cleaned up in the womanizing events."

The "Harvard" team closed the competition strongly after a rocky start by winning eight of the final ten events, mostly because their opponents were all too inebriated to continue. A second round incident saw star balcony-jumper Chris Stevens lose his footing and inadvertently crush his testicles on a railing.

"The only thing that keeps this organization from being recognized as one of the finest in baseball is wins and losses at the major-league level."

CHUCK LAMAR,
FORMER TB DEVIL RAYS GM

"That was a big setback for us," team captain James Mackders said. "Stevey was totally set to take that event and then he winds up in the hospital with an empty scrotum. It just goes to show that anything can happen on any given day."

But even without Stevens, "Harvard" stormed ahead of the other schools by showing a blatant disregard for personal safety, the rights of women and the fact that liver cirrhosis is the leader cause of death among business students in Western Canada.

The local squad's title hopes were buoyed during the Streaking Through the Lobby event when an unidentified student slipped and landed in a shallow fountain, drowning as a group of his intoxicated peers continued at a full, floppy speed past him.

"It's not pretty seeing a naked dude face down in three inches of water," UBC business grad Russel McKinnon commented with his own genitals still exposed and an open beer in each hand. "We kept trying to figure out which team he belonged to, but no matter how many times we asked him, he never answered."

The Games were cut short after only two more events, both of which "Harvard" won handily, after the RCMP showed up and shut them down.

"Some loser school called in the fuzz, and it just harshed everyone's buzz," Mackders explained.

"It's really disappointing to see one guy ruin such a nice event for everyone else," Monét added. "To go out and die like that was just inconsiderate for the rest of the competitors, and we were totally going to kick ass in the Blindfolded Body-Shot competition—that's our marquee event."